Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong has agreed to NTUC's request to allow Minister Chan Chun Sing to serve in the labour movement.

Minister Chan will work at NTUC immediately on a part-time basis and on a full time basis from April 1.

In a letter to NTUC, PM Lee said that he is confident that Chan will make a “positive contribution” in the NTUC.

Minister Chan told his FB fans that he was “humbled by this opportunity to serve the Labour Movement” and would build on the foundation established.

Post by Chan Chun Sing.

We imagine Chan’s reaction when PM first acceded to NTUC’s request.

We snooped around where Trump/Kim will be staying. Here’s what happened.

We tried it so you don’t have to.

Guy sells e-scooter on Carousell, buyer doesn’t pay, gives a million excuses. Real story is how many ‘bros’ used.

Pray they don’t alter the deal any further.

At first, I was like: “Cannot lah, I’m too full from all the work at Ministry of Social and Family Development.”

I don’t know enough about the labour movement and have to learn from Labour Chief Lim Swee Say.

But it’s probably not as problematic as running the Workers’ Party.

Yes, it’s gonna be tough to attract and represent the PMEs in future.

And I didn’t kee qiu for it.

chan chun sing nod

Okay, I did when Labour Chief Lim asked the union leaders to “kee qiu” yesterday.

I wanted to tell PM, “mai lah, mai lah”.

It's like asking me to be Peter Schmeichel.

In a recent interview, Labour chief Lim hopes that his "future Sec-Gen will have a heart, stronger than my heart, a head stronger than my head, and a pair of hands stronger than my pair of hands".

Growing up in a single-parent home, Minister Chan spent his entire life in the public service before entering politics. His time at the Ministry for Social and Family Development (MSF) would have prepared him well in tackling the issues faced by low-income workers.

Moreover, Chan could connect with workers in English, Mandarin, dialect and Malay.

In Minister Chan, Lim may have found an ideal person to lead the labour movement to greater heights.

But he must first win over the union leaders in the upcoming elections at the NTUC National Delegates' Conference.

We wish Minister Chan and NTUC all the best.
